Change Panel Protocol for Peer Reviewers

A Change Panel typically consists of three peer reviewers drawn from designated standing panels for specific types of institutional changes. Reviewers on these standing panels are selected for their expertise related to the nature of the change and their training on conducting change reviews. The role of the Change Panel is to review and recommend approval or denial of substantive changes requested by institutions. This protocol and the Change Panel Report guide the Change Panel to ensure consistency across panels and with HLC’s policies.

Of the three individuals on a panel, one individual is named as the panel chair with the further task of completing and submitting a Change Panel Report to HLC. Typically, a single panel receives three applications at a time and is given four weeks to complete its work on the applications. If the panel needs more time, the panel chair may request an extension explaining the reason for the extra time.

Operationally, the panel chair schedules a conference call with the panel members for a discussion of the applications. The panel will either make a recommendation for an application or will decide that some focused information is necessary before a recommendation can be made. In the latter event, the panel chair requests the information from the applying institution, disseminates it to the other panel members, and sets a time and method for reaching a recommendation. In the event that the panel chair requests further information from the institution, he or she should set a deadline for the institution to send that information allowing enough time for the panel to complete the review on time. If the contact person identified on the form does not respond to the chair, the panel chair should contact HLC for additional contact information. When a recommendation is reached, the chair completes the Change Panel Report, answering all applicable questions. The panel chair must ensure that all parts of the panel report are completed as appropriate before submitting the report, along with a copy of the additional information received from the institution, to HLC.

Options for Recommendations

A Change Panel must choose from among the following four options for recommendation:

- Approve Request
- Approve Modified Request
- Deny Request
- None of the above, with a call for Change Visit

These options are chosen with the following understandings:

- A recommendation for approval with modification means that the panel recommends an approval different from that sought by the institution. For example, if an institution has proposed three new programs and the panel judges that only one of them meets HLC’s requirements, a recommendation for approval of that single program represents a recommendation of approval with modification. Note: Some substantive change requests, such as those for distance and correspondence education, have limited options for modification due to the nature of the approval.

• If approval or approval with modification is chosen, then the panel must be sure that issues documented on the Change Panel Report are sufficiently settled to justify that recommendation. If there are still significant matters not settled (even after further information provided by the institution has been reviewed by the panel), then neither form of approval should be chosen and the change should be denied. In rare cases where evidence on a key issue is found to require review on site, the panel may call for a change visit.

CAUTIONS ABOUT CHANGE PANEL REPORTS

• Make sure the panel report is filled out adequately. Select a rating and provide a complete narrative response for each question. One of the most frequent omissions made by panels is providing narrative responses that are too short for Questions 6a-e of Part A.

Narrative responses are effective when they are evidence-based and evaluative, when they substantiate the panel’s conclusions and recommendations, and when they are directly related to the elements being evaluated.

Also, complete Questions 4 and 5 in Part A only if the change request is about contractual arrangements or competency-based education programs, respectively. Otherwise, check “not applicable” and move to subsequent questions.

• Make sure the recommendations are consistent with the evidence. Panels should not recommend full approval on items that are deficient or not sufficiently settled. Panels should not be afraid to say no.

• Review relevant outstanding monitoring, if any, on the Institutional Status and Requirements (ISR) Report and comments from the HLC staff liaison on the Change Routing and Review Form (CRRF).

• Review documentation of required approvals. The panel should not accept an institution’s claim that it has them or that it does not need them. It is not sufficient that approval has been requested. If questions arise about this matter, the panel chair should contact the change staff at HLC.

• The panel fails to get clarification of a limited character and instead recommends approval contingent on HLC getting the clarification.

- Ask for evidence that the panel determines is missing. Do not assume that it doesn’t exist. Get confirmation.

- If the panel believes it cannot reach a judgment without extensive additional information, it should recommend denial or call for a Change Visit. It should not ask for extensive additional information.

- When a request has multiple facets and not all of them merit approval, recommend approval with modification limiting the request to only what merits approval. (Do not recommend full approval with monitoring or deny the change request when one facet is acceptable.)

- When recommending monitoring, allow the institution time to respond effectively. Do not recommend follow-up that is to be completed in close proximity to the time of panel review.

- Write stipulations or recommendations that are consistent with HLC policy. For example, for requests involving distance delivery, the team should not recommend approval with a limitation conflicting with HLC’s distance delivery levels. Such limitations are permitted only in relation to the new degree levels or in response to outstanding monitoring.

OTHER THINGS TO KNOW

- Reviewers should save their Canopy username and password because they will use the system for every round of review, as well as to manage their Peer Reviewer Profile and respond to invitations to serve on teams and panels.

- All additional information received from the institution must be submitted along with the Change Panel Report. Submit the report in Word and the additional information as a single PDF document.

- A panel usually reviews three requests, but occasionally that number will vary.

- Honorarium is only paid after the Change Panel Report has been processed. If a reviewer does not receive the check within two weeks after the panel report has been submitted, he or she should contact HLC.

- After the panel has completed its work, reviewers should retain the materials for a few months but then discard all materials thereafter.

PROCESS FOLLOWING SUBMISSION OF THE PANEL REPORT

Following submission of the panel report, HLC staff checks the report for clarity, completeness and consistency with HLC’s policies. In the event of any questions or concerns, the panel chair will be contacted for resolution by the panel and resubmission. Once the panel report clears staff review, the institution is notified and invited to submit an institutional response. HLC then submits the panel report, the original change application, any supporting materials, and the institutional response to the Institutional Actions Council (IAC) for review and action.

The IAC may uphold or change the recommendation of the panel. If the panel recommends denial of a request and that recommendation is upheld by the IAC, the institution must wait at least six months to submit a new application. The six-month waiting period normally begins with the institution’s receipt of the panel recommendation (if the institution does not contest the recommendation in its response) or with the IAC decision (if the institution contests the recommendation in its response). However, in some cases, the IAC may uphold the panel’s recommendation of denial but waive the six-month waiting period before re-application. In other circumstances, the IAC may decide to have the original application reviewed a second time by a different panel if the institution has provided information that significantly alters the nature or context of the case.
